

We're all concerned about homeland security. And, unfortunately, that concern has only increased in the wake of the events of September 11, 2001.

Homeland Security has two faces.

The first requires us to protect against enemies both abroad and within.

And, the second requires us to see to it that our economy is strong, people are secure in the jobs, and our communities are safe and secure places to live and raise a family.

Speeches

June 2, 2004 - Are You Safer Today? How Well Have We Used the Thousand Days Since 9/11

December 18, 2002 - Homeland Security Remarks Before the National Press Club

Other Resources

□

Return to Commission Report Issues
(load related news)